14th Annual Queen City Colloquium

CALL FOR PAPERS

The History Graduate Student Association at the University of Cincinnati is pleased to announce its fourteenth annual Queen City Colloquium Graduate History Conference, to take place on Friday, April 7, 2017. This conference is an opportunity for graduate student scholars to present original research and receive critical feedback from peers and experts in their respective fields. The keynote speaker is Dr. Jason Coy from the College of Charleston, author of Strangers and Misfits: Banishment, Social Control, and Authority in Early Modern Germany.

We invite submissions of individual papers from graduate students at all levels of study. Proposals may cover all fields, topics, and approaches of historical scholarship and span all chronological and geographical boundaries.

Proposals are due by January 13, 2017. Submissions should include a working title and a brief abstract that includes a description of the central argument. In addition, a copy of the scholar’s curriculum vitae or resume should be attached. Please limit abstracts to 300 words.

Participants will be notified by February 10, 2017. If selected, participants must submit a final title by March 24, 2017.

Please send proposals and questions to Luke Frederick (frederlj@mail.uc.edu) or Sam Whittaker (whittast@mail.uc.edu). You might also visit our website at http://www.artsci.uc.edu/departments/history/grad/queen_city.html.
